

To - Do List

Another day, another load to do
all while starting baby to wean.
Let's get organised - I'll make a list.
I can be a mom, and still cook and clean ...

Today's To - Do List:

- | | |
|--|---|
| <input type="checkbox"/> wipe down the bathroom | <input type="checkbox"/> put her down for a nap |
| <input type="checkbox"/> vacuum the stairs | <input type="checkbox"/> late lunch, maybe? |
| <input type="checkbox"/> feed and change baby | <input type="checkbox"/> put a load on |
| <input type="checkbox"/> clean the sofa and chairs | <input type="checkbox"/> play with baby again |
| <input type="checkbox"/> get baby to nap | <input type="checkbox"/> do the washing up |
| <input type="checkbox"/> put the washing away | <input type="checkbox"/> unblock that drain |
| <input type="checkbox"/> make the beds | <input type="checkbox"/> feed and bathe baby |
| <input type="checkbox"/> sit with baby and play | <input type="checkbox"/> read a storybook |
| <input type="checkbox"/> prepare the dinner | <input type="checkbox"/> put her to bed |
| <input type="checkbox"/> feed and change baby | <input type="checkbox"/> start to cook |

I finish the third thing on the list
and am now sat here holding you,
I should get on with the rest
but there's nothing I'd rather do.

This mad mission I've embarked upon:
to be Supermom by being organised,
is not something you care for at all -
what you want is me, I've just realised.

Chores will always be there, they can wait,
but you won't, so I need a new list.
Otherwise, before I know it,
I'll regret how much of you I've missed.

Today's To - Do List (revised):

- spend time with you
(chores when possible)
